Now I enjoy reading many books, but I sometimes read the picture book.

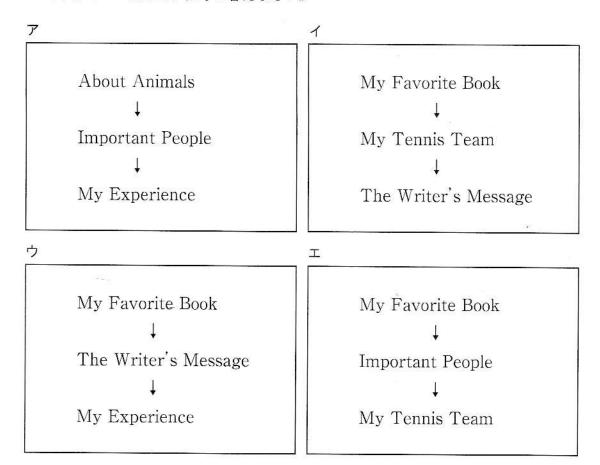

Last week when I was reading a *newspaper, I found an *article about the writer of my favorite picture book. In the article, he said, "There are many kinds of people in the world. Some people are good at speaking and talk a lot, and others are quiet and don't show their *feelings a lot. Some people *stand out and others do not, but they are also important. We should look at them and listen to them *carefully. I try to show their feelings through small animals and small things in my picture books." When I was small, I didn't think about that, so I *was really impressed. After reading this article, I looked around carefully.

Last Saturday I went to school early in the morning to practice tennis. I found one of our members in the *court. He was cleaning the court. He is always quiet and doesn't talk a lot, but I remembered that he often finds something to do for our team. And I also remembered my favorite picture book and the writer's message. I went to him and cleaned the court with him. I had a good time with him. My favorite picture book taught me an important thing. I will try to find small things carefully to have a better life.
